A glance at the Association of American Railroads' 1948 booklet Names and Nicknames of Freight Trains Operated on the Railroads of the United States lists several hundred trains from coast to coast. Most were expedited trains offering premium service for reefers, merchandise and profitable less-than-carload (LCL) shipments. In the 21st century named freights still run, but since the 1960s rail marketing departments have focused their efforts on customers like container shipping lines, UPS, the U.S. Postal Service, trucking lines and auto makers. Most of these trains carry loaded auto racks, auto parts boxcars, double stacks and all-purpose flatcars loaded with containers and trailers (many of which also carry auto parts).

Notable Hotshots

Named freights since the 1960s have included Santa Fe's Super C, Erie Lackawanna's Flying Saucers and Conrail's TrailVans. Most carried trailers and containers as well as auto traffic. One named freight that has endured from the 1948 list—Cotton Belt's (SSW) Blue Streak, outlived its originating railroad. Begun during the Great Depression as a fast LCL train with coordinated truck and train connections at points between East St. Louis, Illinois, and Pine Bluff, Arkansas, the train offered speed and service. It was later extended to Los Angeles via the Southern Pacific (SP) and handled autos, parts and other expedited movements. Today, Blue Streak is a joint Union Pacific/Kansas City Southern/Norfolk Southern intermodal service running on a Los Angeles-Dallas-Shreveport-Atlanta trunk with connections as far south as Miami and as far northeast as New York. Double-stacked containers are its mainstay.

1960s to 1990s

From the 60s to the early 2000s the Blue Streak hauled a mix of expedited auto parts, finished autos, intermodal containers and trailers. Originating first in East St. Louis and later from Memphis, Kansas City and Chicago over the years, the train handled primarily westbound shipments. On the SSW and SP, this train was allowed top speeds of 70mph—faster than other freights—and had priority over all other trains including the pre-Amtrak Sunset Limited passenger train, mostly because this train actually made money. Similar trains on competing lines carried the same kinds of traffic.

Cool Consists

The Blue Streak, as well as other expedited intermodal/auto trains, were colorful. 86' high-cube and 60' auto parts boxcars wore the modern equivalent of billboard schemes. Add auto racks and intermodal trailers and containers to the mix and the train became a brightly-colored, mile-long snake speeding along the mainline. Up front, several reliable high-horsepower road units kept the trains on schedule.

An Expedited Train for Your Railroad

If you want a freight train for your railroad that screams "Get outta my way!" a fast freight with a catchy name like the Flyer, Expediter or Blue Streak is a great addition to your schedule. For a 60s-era train, EMD F3 or F7 diesels pulling a mix of auto parts boxcars and early piggyback flats will look right at home. For the 1970s, high-horsepower EMD and GE diesels pulling auto parts boxcars and 89' all-purpose flats with containers and trailers is ideal, but if it's the late 70s don't forget to add enclosed auto racks too. 1980s to early 2000s trains will have mostly auto boxcars, enclosed auto racks, 89' all-purpose flats and double stacks.

Did You Know?

In the 21st century a few named freight trains still run. In the Bone Valley region of Florida CSX runs the Cargill Shuttle (a phosphate train). BNSF operates its Ethanol Express trains from the midwest to west coast terminals. CSX Tropicana Trains haul orange juice and other expedited freight from Florida to the northeast, midwest and California. CP's Expressway trains handle standard semi trailers between Detroit, Toronto and Montreal on special drive-on flats. Finally, NS Triple Crown trains carry RoadRailer equipment on a network extending from the northeast to Minnesota and Kansas City.

PROTO 2000® EMD SW9/1200 DIESEL HO SCALE

PROTO FASTFACTS™

In Service: 1954 – present

Primary Assignments:

Yard and industrial switcher, one preserved unit.

By 1954, railroads were buying diesels as fast as EMD could build them, and customer demand for more powerful units carried over into the switcher market as well. With the introduction of the new 567C prime mover that year, EMD rolled out its new 1200-horsepower SW9/1200 model, which shared the same basic body (with minor variations) and power rating with its predecessor, the SW9 (which had a 567B prime mover). SW9/1200s were produced through 1966, when earlier GPs began taking over yard chores, but these later SW models have lead long lives, with many still serving shortline and industrial roads long after “retirement” by the original owners.

ONE LAYOUT – TWICE THE FUN!

Racing into the first curve, the yellow truck takes the lead. As they near the intersection, a train approaches. Will one racer get across while the other has to wait? Or will the race be even again when both have to stop? If you love rail and road action, creating one layout for both will double your fun.

Layout Basics

Start with two 4 x 8' sheets of 1-1/2" thick pink Styrofoam (available at hardware stores). Connect the pieces with pegs or Velcro to make it easy to take apart. Or, use foam-compatible glue for a permanent base. Paint the base top and sides brown. Lay out the slot car and train track using the Race & Train Intersection Track at one or both crossings. Or, use bridge piers to elevate the train track at the second crossing. Cut the base to the desired size. Ours measures approximately 5-1/2 x 6-1/2'. Do not glue down the buildings or track. Add ground cover, trees and other details. Connect controls for the race and train sets and you're ready for fun.

Tips & Tricks

If you already have a race set and train set, start with those and add track as needed. We used Dura-Lock™ race and Power-Loc™ train track. Adapters are available for other types of track. Apply ground cover last and only around the buildings and track. By not gluing anything down except the ground cover, the layout can be easily taken apart and stored. When it's time to bring it out again, simply add track and buildings to the areas where there is no ground cover.

PROTO 2000® Power to Pull Your City Trains

To pull the growing City fleet, UP received its first EMD E8s in 1950. Typically run in A-B-B lash-ups, these engines (along with nearly identical E9s), were the signature power on UP's flagship trains through 1971.

Based on units assigned to various City trains, Walther's E8s feature authentic UP-specific detail, including the road's distinctive rooftop snowshields. The models come with multiple unit numbers, and are factory-finished in authentic paint, lettering and striping to match the cars. Choose Sound and DCC equipped, or Standard DC powered versions. Other features include:

- Revised Body
- See-Through Air Intake Grilles
- Helical Gears for Ultra-Quiet & Smooth Running
- Easy Multiple-Unit Operation
- Superb Paint & Lettering
- Painted Metal Grab Irons, Handrails & Lift Rings
- Five-Pole, Skew-Wound, High-Torque, High-Efficiency Can Motor
- Proto MAX Metal Knuckle Couplers
- December 2010 Delivery

Union Pacific City Cars

Now with Factory- Installed Grab Irons & Handrails!

Surrounded by western lore and breathtaking scenery, travel aboard Union Pacific's City trains rose to a new level with the arrival of "Astra Dome" cars in the mid-1950s. Riders aboard the great "Domeliners" enjoyed daily service and a view that was second to none between Chicago and points west. And now, modeling these great streamliners is easy, with this exciting series of Walthers models:

PROTO 1000™

EMD GP15-1 DIESEL

HO SCALE

PROTO FASTFACTS™

In Service: 1975 – Present.

Primary Assignments:

Light road and yard jobs.

Introduced in 1975 as a replacement for aging GP7s and GP9s, the GP15-1 was better suited to the bigger cars entering service, while the low nose improved forward visibility. EMD required customers to provide a trade-in unit, which supplied traction motors, trucks and main generators, reducing the price. GP15-1s looked like 35 Series engines, but with a “tunnel motor” style radiator. Later versions included the GP15-1AC with an alternator and the GP15T, a turbocharged AC model. Nearly 370 were built between 1976 and 1983, and many are still going strong.

- New Roadnames & Unit Numbers
- 14:1 Gear Ratio for Easy Multiple-Unit Operations
- Helical Gears for Ultra-Quiet & Smooth Running
- Five-Pole, Skew-Wound, High Torque, High Efficiency Can Motor

GREAT GONDOLAS

Thrall introduced its utilitarian 53' 14-post gondola in the 1970s. Most commonly used for hauling scrap and steel products, the cars also handle pulpwood, machinery, aggregates, track materials and other loads that require an open-top car. The cars were produced into the 1980s and many are still in use today.

Adding Steel Coils

The Gold Line™ Thrall 53' Gondola car includes an add-on cradle for carrying steel coils. It's easy to install - using plastic-compatible glue, cement the cradle, flat side down, along the center of the floor. The cradle is painted to match the car's primary color, but in service these get beat up and dirty very quickly. Brush the entire cradle and car floor with dark brown or dark rust weathering chinks or powders. The angled cradle rails can be painted black with occasional flecks of glossy/oily areas to represent where coils have rubbed off the rust. Next, add the steel coil load.

Paint the coils dark gray and give them a very light dusting of rust colored chalk. When you place them in the car remember to group them at the ends over the car's trucks like the real roads do, and add only three large coils per end.

They Carry Scrap Too

In scrap service, the car floor is flat to facilitate easier loading. Weather the car with rust and dust-colored weathering paints and chalks. Inside, make sure to add plenty of powdery rust and cement in a few tiny pieces of rust colored foil pieces to represent leftover metal pieces. Following prototype photos, scratch up the exterior paint finish and add rusty scratches for even more realism. Scrap loads are available from a variety of manufacturers.

Did You Know?

Alphabet decals are a quick and easy way to simulate painted signs on various industries, railroad buildings and more.

Start your sign by painting the background color, either on the building, or a piece of wood or styrene. Most signs use simple two color schemes, such as white lettering on a black background or vice-versa, to make them easily visible over long distances. Decals like smooth surfaces, so apply a coat of gloss finish and allow it to dry before proceeding.

Here's a little trick to keep individual letters aligned — start in the middle and alternate out to the edges! For a name like SMITH, begin by putting the I in place first. When dry, apply the T, then the M and so on.

Seal your sign with a final coat of gloss to hide any decal film, and when dry, finish your project with a coat of flat finish.

The Ethanol Industry from Field to Fuel Tank

With ethanol plants sprouting across the continent, railroads have been enjoying a surge of traffic. Ethanol plants convert corn into ethanol and dried distillers grain with solubles (DDGS). Railroads haul corn and gasoline to the plants, and finished ethanol and DDGS to fuel terminals and feed mills.

Did You Know?

About 70% of the gasoline sold in the U.S. contains 10% ethanol. At over 130 billion gallons consumed each year, that's about 9 billion gallons of ethanol and its use is increasing. And railroads haul the majority of it!

RUST EFFECTS

Rust is everywhere in railroad and industrial settings. Adding rust to models is easy using hobby and oil paints readily available at hobby shops and art supply stores.

1. Spray with plastic-compatible black auto primer.
2. Brush on an acrylic dark gray (Panzer gray); it doesn't have to be an even coat, it's better if it isn't. Note: "Scale" paint coloring follows the thought that the farther back you are from an object, the more colors will look somewhat muted or grayed down because of atmospheric conditions such as haze. So the smaller the scale, the more muted the colors would be.
3. Using a black artist's oil wash, concentrate the color on the edges, crevices and panel lines. Water-soluble artist oils are available that can be thinned with turpentine or water. We used turpentine to make our wash.
4. Mix a lighter gray oil color and with a flat brush blend it in the middle of the panels and along the raised edges. Add a little more white to the gray when "hitting" the edges.
5. Add rust. Colors useful for rust: raw umber, burnt umber, burnt sienna, Indian red, Naples yellow, cadmium orange. Start by dabbing on spots of umber with a pointed brush. Then over the umber add smaller dots of burnt sienna. Using a flat stiff brush, dab the areas to lightly blend the colors - don't overdo it, you still want to see the individual colors. By adding red, yellow or orange, you can vary the look of the rust, making it "pop" even more. Oil paint allows for a textured look, simulating pitted and flaking rust areas.
6. Add streaks. Apply a dot of burnt sienna and, with a clean brush, gently brush downwards.
7. After the "rust" dries, take a look and add more highlights if desired, both on the painted and the rusted areas.

This method is ideal for adding realism to the large machinery present in steel mills, such as the Ashland Iron & Steel kits on pages 38-39, as well as on other steel structures, freight cars and vehicles.

Did You Know?

Since the 1930s, car radios have made driving more fun. Until recently, an outside aerial was needed.

This important detail can be added to any car or truck for your era. Most were mounted on the right front fender. Drill a small hole and insert a length of thin wire roughly 2 scale feet long. Secure with a dab of CA and paint it silver.

In the late 1970s, every car had a Citizen's Band (CB) radio antenna. These ranged from small units on the roof or trunk, up to 9' whip antennas on bumpers. You'll see twin antennas on the mirrors of many semi tractors today.

Police and other emergency vehicles also sport an array of antennas. These will vary in length and placement depending on the era and frequencies used, however they're commonly seen along the trunk deck on modern squad cars.

EARLY AMTRAK® TRAINS

We've all heard of railroad-owned trains like the Empire Builder and the 20th Century Limited, but once Amtrak took the reins of America's intercity trains on May 1, 1971, the passenger railroading landscape took on a whole new look.

Colorful Trains Ruled the Rails

On the new Amtrak, the trains that continued to run varied widely. The carrier cherry picked the best cars from member railroads based on maintenance/parts compatibility, age and condition. While many long-distance trains, such as the Empire Builder and the Super Chief remained relatively unchanged, short-haul trains became a wild mix of color and equipment. Amtrak chose to keep large numbers of New York Central coaches (the prototype for the Walther's N car), plus similar cars from other roads, for use on many runs. For overnight trains, 10-6 sleepers became one of the carrier's standards. Smooth-side baggage cars handled luggage and the remaining storage mail and express business. It took several years for Amtrak to repaint all of its new cars.

Cool Consists

Walther's N Scale cars can form the basis of several early-Amtrak consists. On the prototype, E7, E8/9 and F units painted in their former owners' colors powered most trains—Amtrak didn't start receiving new power until 1973. Passenger counts were still low (the reason railroads got out of the passenger business) and many trains were relatively short. A train of a baggage car and two to four coaches was common for short hauls; many carried no food service cars, or carried coaches rebuilt with a snack counter in one end. These consists were common on Empire Service runs in the east, but similar trains ran out of other terminals. On overnight runs, a diner followed the coaches and a 10-6 sleeper or two brought up the markers. Because the fleet contained similar cars from several lines, each train was an unpredictable mix of color into the late 1970s.

Did You Know?

While many popular figures show up over and over on layouts, you can make yours unique with a bit of paint and a few minutes work.

Changing the color of clothes is as simple as repainting shirts, dresses or pants and shoes. Details such as patches or buttons can be added with tiny dots of paint. And a little weathering can add grass stains, spills or mud.

Changing a figure's hair color can be done quickly too. And you can also age figures by giving them gray or white hair. You can also add sideburns, mustaches and beards to give male figures more personality or backdate them to fit an earlier era.
