PAPER INDUSTRY CARS

The paper industry is heavily dependent on railroad service. Railroads haul raw materials into paper mills and finished paper products out. Many kinds of freight cars are dedicated to paper mills.

What Comes In...

Railcars serving paper mills congregate in the main yard. Inbound wood for papermaking arrives in several forms: pulpwood, wood chips, recycled scrap paper or market pulp, but not all plants receive all forms. Pulpwood arrives on purpose-built flatcars. 63' Pulpwood Cars are equipped with side bunks designed to hold stacks on lumber in place. Sieco Pulpwood Flatcars have a V-shaped deck that keeps logs in place using gravity. Other pulpwood haulers include various 50' to 65' gondolas and bulkhead flatcars equipped with side stakes/bunks. Wood chips arrive in high-capacity gondolas and/or hoppers optimized for light, bulky loads. Recycled scrap paper and market pulp (bales of raw wood fiber that hasn't yet been rolled into paper) arrive in various boxcars. Other materials for paper making include kaolin clay slurry and chemicals used for bleaching certain papers, which move in 16,000-gallon funnel-flow and other tank cars. Powdered clay may also arrive in covered hoppers. Finally, large plants that generate their own steam and/or power may receive fuel oil in tank cars or coal in hoppers.

Must Go Out

Outbound paper, especially newsprint, moves in cars such as Gunderson 50' High-Cube Paper-Service Boxcars. Since the 1980s high-cube cars have been preferred for newsprint loading because the rolls can be stacked two-high.

Other boxcars also haul newsprint, in some cases because of height restrictions along the routes to customers. In addition, mills that produce pulp ship the bales in general service boxcars. If the mill is coal fired, a two-bay covered hopper might occasionally be used to ship out fly ash to cement plants.

The Scene at the Yard

A post-70s paper mill interchange yard (where cars enter and exit the facility from the mainline railroad) will be full of the cars mentioned above, plus a switcher from the connecting railroad or the plant switcher. As on a regular railroad, operations are based out of a small yard office. Small EMD switchers such as the SW9/1200 have been common for these duties since the 1960s. They're perfect for shuttling cars from the yard to loading/unloading sites in the plant. In the yard, spilled wood chips and a few fallen pulpwood logs along the tracks will add realism to the scene.

PROTO 2000® EMD SW9/1200 DIESEL HO SCALE

New Roadnames & Numbers

February 2010 Delivery*

Sound & DCC $239.98 | Standard DC $159.98

PROTO FASTFACTS™

In Service: 1954 – present

Primary Assignments:

Yard and industrial switcher, one preserved unit.

By 1954, railroads were buying diesels as fast as EMD could build them, and customer demand for more powerful units carried over into the switcher market as well. With the introduction of the new 567C prime mover that year, EMD rolled out its new 1200-horsepower SW9/1200 model, which shared the same basic body (with minor variations) and power rating with its predecessor, the SW9 (which had a 567B prime mover). SW9/1200s were produced through 1966, when earlier GPs began taking over yard chores, but these later SW models have lead long lives, with many still serving shortline and industrial roads long after “retirement” by the original owners.

PROTO 2000® Power to Pull Your City Trains

To pull the growing City fleet, UP received its first EMD E8s in 1950. Typically run in A-B-B lash-ups, these engines (along with nearly identical E9s), were the signature power on UP's flagship trains through 1971.

Based on units assigned to various City trains, Walthers E8s feature authentic UP-specific detail, including the road's distinctive rooftop snowshields. The models come with multiple unit numbers, and are factory-finished in authentic paint, lettering and striping to match the cars. Choose Sound and DCC equipped, or Standard DC powered versions. Other features include:

- Revised Body
- See-Through Air Intake Grilles
- Helical Gears for Ultra-Quiet & Smooth Running
- Easy Multiple-Unit Operation
- Superb Paint & Lettering
- Painted Metal Grab Irons, Handrails & Lift Rings
- Five-Pole, Skew-Wound, High-Torque, High-Efficiency Can Motor
- Proto MAX Metal Knuckle Couplers
- December 2010 Delivery

Union Pacific City Cars

Now with Factory- Installed Grab Irons & Handrails!

Surrounded by western lore and breathtaking scenery, travel aboard Union Pacific's City trains rose to a new level with the arrival of "Astra Dome" cars in the mid-1950s. Riders aboard the great "Domeliners" enjoyed daily service and a view that was second to none between Chicago and points west. And now, modeling these great streamliners is easy, with this exciting series of Walthers models:

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Early American railroads traditionally named all of their equipment. Locomotives such as “Lightning” or “Bison” conjured up images of speed or power. Passenger trains were named, and their cars carried names of states, famous people, cities and more.

By the 1850s, railroads had acquired large fleets of cars and names gave way to numbers for work-a-day equipment such as coaches, and cars that weren’t occupied by the public such as baggage and mail cars.

But as the sleeper evolved in the 1860s, builders continued to name individual cars. Famous spas, resorts and hotels were popular choices, along with words that conjured up instant images of splendid luxury.

Nice Work if You Can Get It

The September 7, 1897 New York Times noted Miss Florence Pullman, daughter of the sleeping car magnate, was drawing an annual salary of $10,000 for selecting car names:

“In the performance of her duties, Miss Pullman evidences a decided preference for names which sound euphoniously, and which have a soft and musical quality.”

Her selections ran the gamut from heads of state, to flowers, to famous cities and much more. Smoking cars were named to suggest a luxurious retreat, such as “Sultan,” while observations were named for areas of great scenic beauty like “Yellowstone.” Pullman-operated dining cars carried the names of famous chefs, or the names of cooks who had served famous families.

Names and Numbers

By the early 1900s, Pullman was the dominant builder and operator of sleeping cars. And with all-steel construction, it was possible to build identical cars in virtually any number needed.

As a result, Pullman had nearly 10,000 cars in service by the late 1920s. As part of its internal record keeping, the company assigned each standard interior arrangement a plan number. Groups of identical cars were assigned a lot number for construction (and later modifications). And, finally each series was given related names. While these could come from any source, a series might start or end with a common word, such as Fort, or River, or a name such as Lincoln.

Railroads that contracted with Pullman for sleepers on their flagship trains also had a say in selecting car names. Favorite choices included people, places and events of historic significance, the names of the founders of the line, important trackside cities, or natural wonders along the railroad. For the public, named cars were that much easier to find on busy station platforms, and riding “Mountain View” sounded more fun than simply boarding #1212. Railroad and Pullman employees also used car names for faster reference.

New Technology, Old Tradition

Shortly after Union Pacific rolled out its new M-10000 streamliner in early 1934, a matching third car was sometimes seen in the experimental consist — an 8-1-1 sleeper.

While it represented the newest technology, it’s name, Overland Trail, was a salute to the earliest days of the railroad, as much of the original right-of-way had been built along the route of the old trail.

Over the next few years, the Streamliners would welcome sleepers named for rivers, lakes, California cities and famous attractions to name just a few. As the fleet was expanded in years to come, sleepers continued to carry romantic and colorful names through the end of service in 1971. Today, the tradition continues in UP’s excursion fleet, with cars named for famous trains, personalities and communities.

SPRING CLEANING ON THE RAILROAD

Spring is the traditional start for repairs along every railroad. In earlier eras local section gangs handled small jobs, with bigger projects tackled by dedicated crews. Today's railroads use specialized machinery or contract with outside firms.

Where to Begin

Alone or with other engineering department officials, the roadmaster inspects the right-of-way, prioritizing work, estimating costs and ordering supplies. Depending on the era, the trip may be aboard an inspection car, or for a closer look, a handcar, speeder or hi-rail vehicle.

Keep it Clean

Bridges and culverts are checked for ice jams or debris. Where possible, these obstructions are removed to prevent flooding or washouts.

Drainage or "borrow ditches" (so called as the earth was "borrowed" to build up the roadbed) alongside the tracks are also checked and cleaned. These may require deepening or grading.

Today it can be done with construction equipment, but it was once the job of the Jordan spreader and small steam shovels known as "ditchers."

Straightening Up

As frost melts and the ground softens, track and roadbed may settle, pulling rails out of gauge, requiring adjustment. Soft ground can also cause the roadbed to drop, creating low spots that may be temporarily shimmed until the ground is dry enough to do more work.

A Lawnmower on Steroids

Vegetation control was one of the first areas for specialized machinery like today's brush cutters. Aptly described as a lawnmower on steroids, this self-propelled machine can move on or off track. Hydraulic arms extend the reach and powerful cutting heads make short work of trees and grass.

More Work Coming Soon

If big projects are planned, lengths of rail, stone riprap, ballast or new ties will be delivered by work trains, unloaded and stacked near the job site.

Modeling Spring Cleaning

Generally, the earlier you do the work the more work will be done by hand. Include more machinery for modern scenes. Small stockpiles of materials alongside the tracks to indicate repair work is scheduled for that area shortly are an easy detail for any era.

Did You Know?

Nothing lasts forever, but many older freight cars go on to new lives after they've been officially "retired."

If the body is in reasonably good shape, the car may simply be lifted off its trucks and set down beside the track as a storage shed. While railroads often use them for this purpose, many are also sold to private owners, including grain elevators, farmers and small industries.

Obsolete cars that can't be used in interchange service but are still sound can be reassigned to company service. Often part of the maintenance or engineering departments, they'll still carry a wide range of loads. Before better highways and hotels, older cars were often rebuilt as sleepers, kitchens and office cars for work crews as well.

Did You Know?

Most of today's knuckle couplers include a metal wire so they can be activated using magnetic uncoupling systems.

Installed on the bottom of the knuckle, these parts simulate the train air line between coupled cars, and can be made more realistic with a quick coat of dark brown or weathered black paint.

The Ethanol Industry from Field to Fuel Tank

With ethanol plants sprouting across the continent, railroads have been enjoying a surge of traffic. Ethanol plants convert corn into ethanol and dried distillers grain with solubles (DDGS). Railroads haul corn and gasoline to the plants, and finished ethanol and DDGS to fuel terminals and feed mills.

Did You Know?

About 70% of the gasoline sold in the U.S. contains 10% ethanol. At over 130 billion gallons consumed each year, that's about 9 billion gallons of ethanol and its use is increasing. And railroads haul the majority of it!

BIRTH OF THE GAS STATION

Getting gasoline to consumers proved a challenge. Pipelines stretched thousands of miles. Ships, railroad tank cars and trucks were the delivery vehicles. In the early days, gas was sold by the bucketful from barrels at hardware and grocery stores. The first gas pumps were installed right next to the road. But customers wanted easy access wherever they went. Oil companies responded with a new idea - the gas station. The first commercial buildings to be set back from the street, gas stations allowed customers to fill up their tanks without disrupting traffic.

Brand Identity

Gas in the 1900s was plentiful and cheap but motorists had no way to judge its quality. Oil companies used corporate logos, slogans, uniforms and other methods to attract customer loyalty. In 1916 Wadhams Oil and Grease Company hired prominent Milwaukee architect, Alexander Eschweiler to design their new gas stations. Eschweiler's Japanese-inspired design with a pagoda-style roof, black walls and yellow trim made the stations immediately recognizable. Approximately 100 were built between 1917 and 1930 in the upper Midwest. Each station was unique but the shared roof-style and paint scheme identified each as Wadhams. By 1935, there were more than 200,000 gas stations throughout the United States. Some, like Wadhams, featured eye-catching designs like teepees, Swiss chalets and Greek temples.

Modern Times

Only a few Wadhams buildings remain today, all converted to other uses.

The prototype for our model is now a historic landmark. In the early 1900s, motorists got their gasoline at the grocery store. Today we get groceries at the gas station.

WALTHERS WORKSHOP

REALISTIC BRICK

Here's a great way to make your brick models look like the real thing.

1. Prime with plastic-compatible auto primer (for a red brick structure, use red oxide primer). Brush on main brick color (sample shows Mineral Red). Let dry 24 hours.

2. Apply foam putty (spackling compound also works) with finger and wipe off excess with a small sponge (a cosmetic application wedge works great), filling the mortar lines. After the putty has dried, dampen the sponge and wipe the top surfaces of the brick to remove any putty residue.

3. When dry, use your choice of artist colored pencils on individual bricks in random order. Look at real brick walls and notice the variety of brick colors within even the same grouping; shades of red, blues, purples and tans. Fine tip felt pens can be used instead of colored pencils.

4. Paint details such as windowsills, wall caps, etc. a concrete color, gray or tan.

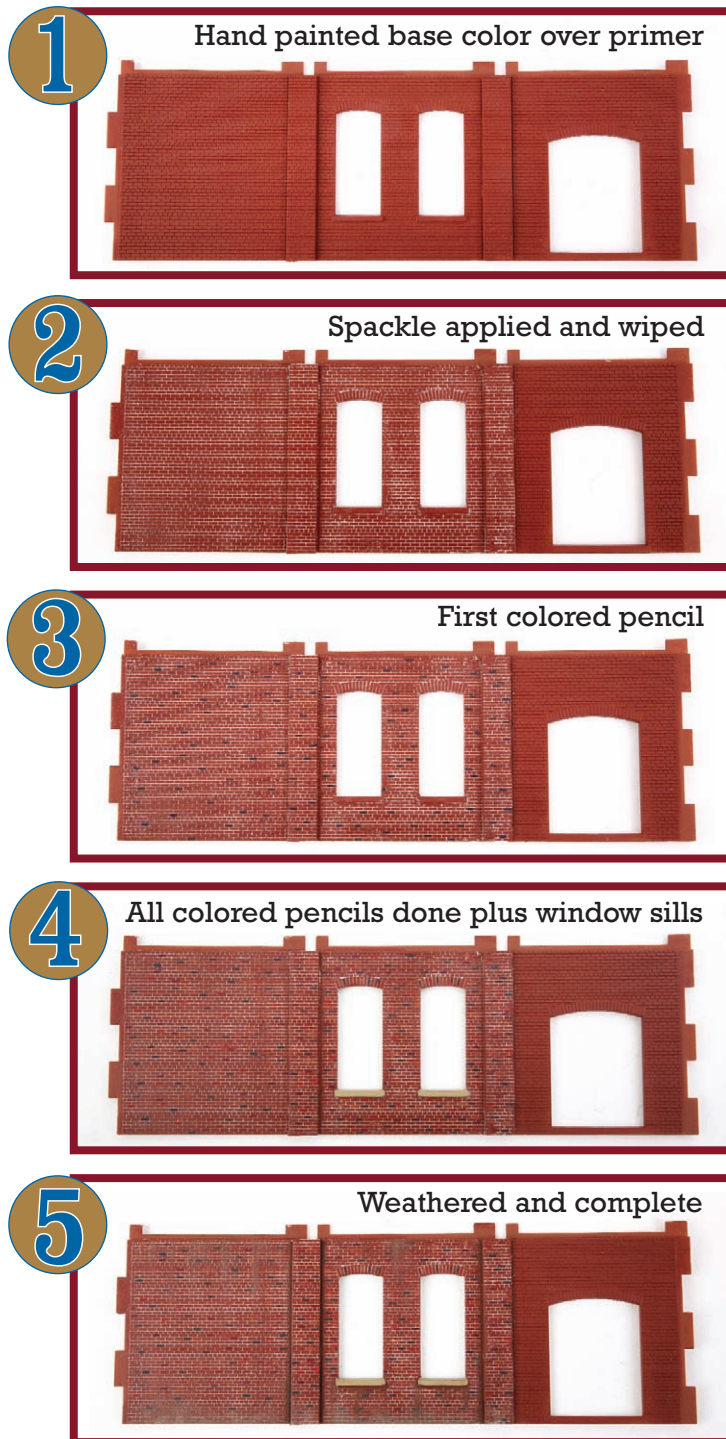

5. Weather the brick surface using oils or weathering chalks and powders available from a variety of manufacturers (see walthers.com).

This technique is an ideal finish for the Rail Shops Series buildings on pages 40 & 41 and other brick structures available in this Flyer, at your hobby shop and at walthers.com.

Did You Know?

Need some new equipment for your local police or fire department? Just about any standard car or truck can be transformed into a new role with a coat of paint and a few details.

While the basic four-door sedan has been used for decades, a wide range of light trucks, vans, station wagons and similar equipment are now in service.

Modern light bars, sirens and decals are available as after-market parts to complete your project.

Did You Know?

Replacing original Rapido couplers is a quick and easy way to keep older equipment running on your railroad. Once the standard for all N Scale models, today they're being phased out in favor of more realistic and reliable knuckle couplers.

Older cars with truck-mounted couplers can be upgraded with a bit of work. Underframes and car ends may need to be cut or filed to install of body-mounted boxes and new knuckle couplers to improve operation.
