So how does that fresh-cut balsam get from Michigan to a Chicago tree lot? What about the North Carolina Fraser fir waiting for a buyer on a sidewalk in New York? Or the Scotch pine from the Pacific Northwest for sale in Los Angeles? Chances are it traveled at least part of the way by train.

O Tannenbaum

Printed references to Christmas trees date back to 1531 and the Pennsylvanian German settlements had community trees by around 1747. But it wasn't until the 1850s that Christmas trees became fashionable in the eastern U.S. and the first retail lot opened in New York. By the 1900s large stores were putting trees on display and the first tree farms were established.

From Forest to Farm

Early settlers simply went out into the forest and chopped down a suitable tree. But entrepreneurs soon began growing trees the same as other crops – on the farm. This allowed growers to keep them pruned to the symmetrical shape favored by buyers.

Tree Transportation

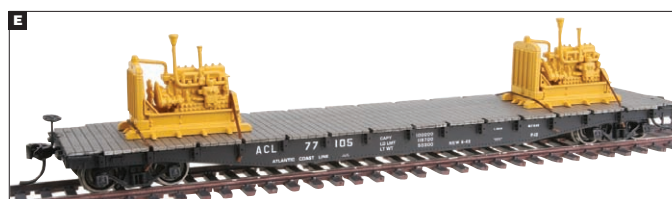

Over the years Christmas trees traveled via nearly every form of transportation. They were dragged out of the forest on sleds, piled onto flat cars or staked gondolas and loaded into boxcars. Ships even carried Christmas trees from Upper Michigan and Wisconsin to Chicago. As the interstate highway system expanded, trucks became the preferred mode but the development of intermodal containers brought tree travel back to the railroad. Today, freshness is key and many farms use helicopters, refrigerated trailers and express shipping services.

Holiday on Your Layout
Christmas tree farms are fun and easy to model. Find an area near the tracks and "plant" rows of conifers. It takes 7 to 15 years for a tree to reach maturity so be sure to use several sizes grouping them together by height. Add a shed and a house or office. A siding with some flat cars or gondolas stacked with trees will give the scene that final festive touch.

Did You Know?

#1 There's a Christmas tree farm in nearly every state in the U.S. and in many parts of Canada. Oregon produces the greatest number of trees but Michigan has the greatest variety, up to 13 different species.

#2 Candles lit up the first Christmas trees. In 1882 a colleague of Thomas Edison, Edward Johnson, wired together a string of red, white and blue bulbs to create electric lights. Although mass produced by the 1900s, electric lights were too expensive for average Americans until 15-year old Albert Sadacca came up with a way to manufacture colored lights affordably in 1917.

HOLIDAY EXPRESS TRAIN SET ADDS FUN UNDER ANY CHRISTMAS TREE!

G Holiday Express

New Bright. This set transforms your Christmas scene into an animated winter wonderland with eight moving figures and 25 working lights and sounds. A special sound unit provides constant chugging (easily shut off with the mute button) and individual controls so you can hear Santa's "Ho, ho, ho!" or All Aboard, then blow the whistle and ring the bell as the train pulls out. The set comes with a handsome 4-4-0 loco, with an elf ringing the bell and old St. Nick waving to all the good boys and girls on his route. Aboard the Tree Top tender, a hard-working elf passes logs to the boiler, while his partner hides in the toolbox. On the Candy Dancer, two elves work the pump while the rooftop decorations twirl. At the rear is the Toy Shop Caboose, where toy soldiers march into Santa's bag under the watchful eyes of two more elves. The cars and loco come fully assembled in holiday colors, and a 51-1/2 x 70-1/2" oval of new style track, controller, track clip and transformer are all included to start the fun.
